Washington D.C. --- West Virginia's Fourth District Congressman Nick J. Rahall, has nominated two southern West Virginia residents and two volunteer groups, for recognition during the week of April 17-23, which has been designated, National Volunteer Week.

"In an effort to honor volunteers throughout the nation, the National Volunteer Action Awards serve as a special tribute to groups and individuals who unselfishly give of themselves to help others," Congressman Rahall pointed out.

Congressman Rahall's nominees for the Fourth Congressional District are:

Ms. Mae Stallard, Williamson, West Virginia

The Columbian Squires, Beckley, West Virginia

Stafford District Community Action Group

Miss Vivian Cox, Beckley, West Virginia

"These fine people and organizations have been involved in worthwhile programs of benefit to their communities," Rahall said, "and I am proud to have this opportunity to see their talents recognized."

Congressman Rahall went on to say, "Of course, we can all think of many West Virginia residents who deserve thanks and appreciation for their volunteer activities, that is why we should all take a little extra effort to extend our best wishes to such individuals and groups during National Volunteer Week."
